

Carolyn Freeman

biography, cont'd.

The songwriting process for Carolyn has no set form or rigid structure.

"I am inspired by so many different things," said Carolyn. "Sometimes I'm awakened in the middle of the night, or I'll hear something in a sermon or see something on a sign. Basically, I get bits and pieces and then fit them together like a puzzle."

In addition to her writing, Carolyn says that her family is an exceedingly significant part of her ministry.

"The family unit is very important to me. We are very close and ministry oriented, and everyone just helps out in whatever way they can," Carolyn expounded.

"The doors have just opened up all over the place," said Carolyn. "My ministry has been so well received. I could never have imagined it to happen as smoothly as it has."

Carolyn's plans are to eventually form a trio and take her ministry to another level.

"I have so many things that are stewing around in my mind about where this ministry needs to go. I will eventually form a group, but right now, this is where I'm called to be," Carolyn responded.

It is a refreshing sound to hear of an artist/songwriter/performer who does not get too focused on the things that do not seem to matter from an eternal perspective.

"I do not want to focus on getting to the top," said Carolyn. "I just want to win souls. I want to do everything 'with soul purpose'."
